ANT100Y examines society and culture from various anthropological perspectives: Evolutionary Anthropology, the study of the evolution and biological diversity of humans and non-human primates; Archaeology, the study of the material evidence of human activities in the past; Linguistic and Semiotic Anthropology, the study of ways in which language and other systems of human communication contribute to the reproduction, transmission, and transformation of culture; and Social-Cultural Anthropology, the study of the great range of social and cultural organization in various societies across the world. The first half of the course covers Evolutionary Anthropology and Archaeology and the second half focuses on Social-Cultural-Linguistic Anthropology. This course involves attendance at one 2-hour lecture per week and one 1-hour tutorial every second week.

- Assignments are submitted through Turnitin.com. See website for submission instructions.
- Normally, students will be required to submit their course essays to Turnitin.com for a review of textual similarity and detection of possible plagiarism. In doing so, students will allow their essays to be included as source documents in the Turnitin.com reference database, where they will be used solely for the purpose of detecting plagiarism. The terms that apply to the University's use of the Turnitin.com service are described on the Turnitin.com web site.

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY

- Anthropology 100 has a zero tolerance policy on plagiarism. Please see How to Avoid Plagiarism for more details.

Academic integrity is essential to the pursuit of learning and scholarship in a university, and to ensuring that a degree from the University of Toronto is a strong signal of each student's individual academic achievement. As a result, the University treats cases of cheating and plagiarism very seriously. The University of Toronto's Code of Behaviour on Academic Matters outlines the behaviours that constitute academic dishonesty and the processes for addressing academic offences.

All suspected cases of academic dishonesty will be investigated following procedures outlined in the Code of Behaviour on Academic Matters. If you have questions or concerns about what constitutes appropriate academic behaviour or appropriate research and citation methods, you are expected to seek out additional information on academic integrity from your instructor or from other institutional resources.

Another excellent website is the new university website on Academic Integrity.

ACCOMMODATION

The University provides academic accommodations for students with disabilities in accordance with the terms of the Ontario Human Rights Code. This occurs through a collaborative process that acknowledges a collective obligation to develop an accessible learning environment that both meets the needs of students and preserves the essential academic requirements of the University's courses and programs.
